Sarah Marie Irving

College of Veterinary Medicine & Biomedical Sciences
Doctor of Veterinary Medicine
May 10, 2017

Sarah has a passion for feline medicine that began with her experience growing up caring for her family's geriatric cat. Her first veterinary mentor, Dr. Kennedy, helped teach her the amazing effect a veterinarian can have on the patient and the whole family. Since then she has expanded her knowledge of feline medicine by being heavily involved with the Student Chapter of the American Association of Feline Practitioners. She was a student representative for two years and was the previous year's club president. She spent 4 weeks externing at two different cat only practices, where she was able to help refine her skills on palpating feline thyroids and kidneys and managing chronic kidney disease. Her long term goal is to become ABVP certified in feline medicine within seven years. Her favorite area of practice is surgery. She plans to focus her continuing education courses on a combination of surgery wet-labs and ultrasound training.
